CONTAMINATED AREAS in Granite City and Madison scheduled for soil removal under the Superfund cleanup are shown by the shaded areas of this map. The soil would be added to the present Taracorp waste pile. Areas in Venice and Eagle Park are also scheduled for cleanup.

Mayor says lead cleanup threatens development

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Mayor Von Dee Cruse is not a fan of the proposed cleanup plan for the Taracorp lead contamination.

"They're talking about putting a hazardous waste dump right in the middle of the city," Cruse said. "That's going to kill development. Who is going to build next to it?"

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will hold a public hearing at 7 p.m. today in the Granite City Township building.

The EPA has proposed a $25 million cleanup project that includes soil removal from residential properties in a 50-acre area, demolition of a building at the Taracorp lead waste pile at 16th and State Streets, removal of lead-contaminated paving material in several alleys in Venice and removal of lead-contaminated fill material in Eagle Park.

Under the plan, the material from all other sites would be moved to the Taracorp pile and the pile then permanently sealed in a containment area for the contaminated materials.

"If the contamination is serious enough to scrape six inches of dirt out of yards, it's serious enough to haul the dirt somewhere else," Cruse said. "You want a focal point for our community, where they get all that dirt piled up on top of the existing dirt you're going to be able to see it from the Arch."

Cruse said he is tired of environmental groups "just ignoring" the economic effect their plans have on communities.

"I want clean air, I want clean water. But there has to be some compromise (the general public) has got to start thinking about it," Cruse said. "They come waltzing into town with their program and wipe us off the map as far as the development of Granite City."

Boy Scout councils considering merger

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

GRANITE CITIES — Two local Boy Scout councils are considering a merger.

The Cahokia Mound Council and the Piasa Bird Council may consolidate into one council, scout officials said Tuesday. Piasa takes in all of the Greater Alton area, while Cahokia takes in all of the rest of Madison County and all of Bond County.

Jim Winkler, scout executive for the Cahokia Mound Council, said the executive boards of the respective councils each approved a motion two weeks ago to set up a joint committee to study the consolidation issue. Piasa Bird Council President Dick Thompson confirmed the actions.

Winkler said the chief benefit of consolidation would be an expansion of scout programs through money saved by eliminating duplicate jobs. He said each council currently has its own scout executive, office manager, registrar and bookkeeper. A consolidated council would have one of each.

Winkler said salaries for professional staff members constitute "the highest single line item in the budget." The money saved would be used "to provide more programs to more youth," he said.

The community gets a better return on its investment, and so do the United Ways," Winkler said. The United Way is a principal source of Boy Scout funding. Piasa's Thompson said he also

GCHS gets out hook, sponsors 'gong show'

GRANITE CITY — It'll cost $1.00 plus 25¢ to get in and the "entertainment" won't be Hollywood quality, but for the chance to see friends and teachers make fools of themselves, Granite City High School students and faculty are expected to attend the Gong Show sponsored by the student council Feb. 22.

"We expect it to be a sellout, so I would suggest people plan to get their tickets early," said Steve Hamilton, student council sponsor.

The event will run from 7 to 9:30 p.m. in the Granite City High School auditorium, Madison Avenue and Nameoki Road. Contact student council members or Hamilton for tickets.

Fire chief's future may be up in smoke

By Andy Siering
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Like smoke from a smoldering fire rumors that Mayor Von Dee Cruse will replace Fire Chief Charles Bernaix have been swirling around in the City Council and Fire Department for months.

Cruse will neither confirm nor deny that he will replace Bernaix when he makes his annual appointments later this spring, but sources say he has been unhappy for some time.

"I haven't really given a lot of thought to it at this time," Cruse said. "There may be some changes in May. We're a ways off."

If Cruse were to fire Bernaix before then, he would be entitled to a hearing before the City Council. By waiting until May 1, Cruse can simply decline to reappoint him.

Insiders privately say Cruse is unhappy with Bernaix's independent attitude and the fact that management and labor in the fire department "get along too well" under Bernaix's leadership. He was promoted to Fire Chief 253 for three years, resigning in February 1988.

Cruse said he has not talked to Bernaix about replacing him, and Bernaix confirmed that.

Bernaix would say little. "If I'm gone, I'm gone. But I think I've done a good job. I think the department's running smoothly."

Death goes to grand jury

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — A grand jury will begin considering testimony today in the suspected abuse death of 2-year-old Heather Niedringhaus.

Subpoenas were served family members on Tuesday and Wednesday, Police Capt. Kip Pomeroy said.

Grand jurors will hear testimony from subpoenaed witnesses prior to beginning their investigation into circumstances of the Granite City child's death, the officer said.

Heather died during surgery at 2:10 a.m. Friday at St. Louis Children's Hospital. Her autopsy reportedly indicated that Heather died of complications from a rupture of the small intestines believed to be caused by a blow or blows to the abdomen.

Detective Rich Schardan and Detective Ned Tapp, police investigators assigned to the case, also are expected to testify before the grand jury, Pomeroy said.

Heather was taken by her mother, Kathy Phillips, 31, of St. Elizabeths Medical Center at 8:45 p.m. Thursday and the baby was transported by helicopter to Children's Hospital at 10:10 p.m.

Police interviewed several persons, including the child's mother, her stepfather, James Phillips, and her natural father, Jerry Watson of Blackwell, Mo. James and Kathy Phillips reside in the 3000 block of Iowa Street.

Union files grievance over business cleanup

By Mike Myers
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Some city officials are criticizing a union grievance filed against the Street Department over a downtown businessman's volunteer street cleanup two weeks ago.

The grievance, filed by Chuck Lewis, shop steward for Transamerica, 550 Adams, stems from complaints by street department members over a crew that was cleaning up streets in the downtown area.

The men had been hired by Don Caughran, owner of Don's Hardware, 1837 Delmar Ave., to pick up trash along storefronts in the downtown area.

Although Caughran had the permission of the street superintendent and the mayor, he didn't realize his men would take their job quite as seriously as they did.

The men were entering the street, cleaning gutters, and, in some cases, catch basins.

The situation came to a head when street cleaners saw the men cleaning up on Adams Street, directly in front of the street department headquarters. The situation wasn't helped by the presence of a Press-Record/Journal photographer.

Briefly*Three strikes; car finally out

GRANITE CITY — Scott W. Fanning, 32, of the 1700 block of Spring Avenue was injured at 3:30 p.m. Saturday when he was struck by his driverless car.

Fanning told police he started his auto, parked in his driveway, in order to warm it up. He went back inside his house and heard the car crash into his fence.

Running outside, he attempted to stop the car, but fell to the ground and was struck by the vehicle. It continued into the street and struck a parked car before coming to a stop in the middle of the street.

Pleads innocent to charges

GRANITE CITY — Brian Keith Arnold, 25, of the 2100 block of Lynch Avenue pleaded innocent Feb. 2 to charges of resisting a peace officer, aggravated assault, criminal trespass to property and disorderly conduct.

A judge set bail at $500 and Arnold was transferred to the Madison County Jail in Edwardsville the next day.

Arnold was arrested at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 1 at the Tip Top Tavern, 1746 State St. where police responded to a call of a fight in progress.

Two men were standing at the end of the bar being restrained by a third man, who was keeping the other two apart. An employee at the tavern said Arnold had cursed the other person and attempted to provoke a fight.

When Arnold allegedly walked over to the man a second time, police who had just arrived ordered both to leave and not return. After cursing officers as he left, Arnold allegedly returned to the Tip Top.

Arnold was being escorted to a squad car by Patrolmen Ken Dowdy and Kevin Thebeau. Arnold allegedly tried to pull away, the officers and the suspect lost their balance and fell against a squad car. Arnold suffered a cut above the right eye.

At the police station, he allegedly advanced toward an officer when handcuffs were removed and he was slapped by the officer.

Later, Arnold requested medical attention and was taken to St. Elizabeth Medical Center, where he was treated for the cut and was returned to police custody.

Prison population sets record

SPRINGFIELD — Director Kenneth McGinnis of the Department of Corrections reports that the adult prison population has hit 25,000 inmates for the first time in the history of the agency.

The state's prison system was designed for 18,743, so this represents an increase of more than 33 percent, he said.

"The prison population continues to grow at an alarming rate. Since Jan. 1, the adult population has increased by 288. That is an average weekly increase of 72, in line with the 1989 weekly increase of 70," McGinnis said.

Recent projections indicate the population will rocket to 26,300 by July 1 and reach 29,000 within 18 months.

The projections are based on conservative estimates, such as no new legislation enhancing current sentences or mandating automatic prison sentences, he said.

McGinnis cited his predecessor's statement, made in the DOC Special Report on Population Projections:

"Director Lane said it before he left Corrections, and it bears repeating. We can't build our way out of this predicament, although some expansion is obviously necessary."

"This department stands ready to work with state lawmakers and criminal justice policymakers to develop the creative, effective solutions needed to meet the challenges created by prison crowding."

DUI revocation takes place

GRANITE CITY — The Secretary of State's Office has revoked the driver's license of a local man convicted for driving under the influence of alcohol.

2 arrested in truck burglary

By Valerie Evenden
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — Several vehicles parked in the area of Adams and Center streets had been entered and searched, police discovered about 12:35 a.m. Tuesday. Suspects were questioned about the incident.

Terry D. Becker, 17, of the 2300 block of Elmwood Avenue, was eventually charged in a felony warrant alleging burglary in connection with one of the vehicle's burglaries, Assistant Police Chief Ron Selph said Wednesday.

Detectives also linked a 16-year-old Granite City male juvenile to the burglary and an application for a juvenile petition against the youth is pending, Selph said.

While in custody, Becker was served a second warrant charging felony theft relating to property allegedly taken in a Jan. 28 burglary at Eddie's Lounge and Drive-In Liquor Store at 2900 Nameoki Road, Edwardsville.

The judge issued a mittimus document ordering Becker to be transferred to the Madison County Jail in Edwardsville.

The incident which culminated in the arrests first came to police attention when an officer saw a vehicle parked in the lot on the ground in front of a vehicle parked in the lot across the street at a residence in the 2400 block of Adams Street.

The automatic scroller saw tool did not belong to occupants at the residence, police learned.

Officers then discovered the tool had been taken from a white Ford truck owned by Gary Brazzell, who lives at another address in the 2400 block of Adams Street.

Entry into the truck was gained through the passenger side door, which was shattered. Nothing of value appeared to have been taken, she said.

John G. O'Fallon, whose 1982 Chevrolet pickup truck was also parked in a driveway in the 2400 block of Adams Street, discovered the driver's door on his truck was half-way open. None of his property appeared to be missing, McGuire said.

While checking for suspects responsible for entering the vehicles on Adams Street about 1:30 a.m. Tuesday, officers located other vehicles parked on Center Street which appeared to have been entered and searched, police said.

The doors of several vehicles were left ajar or partially open, an officer said.

A 1982 Pontiac belonging to John J. Jonas of the 2400 block of Center Street was entered and the glove box was open with papers scattered about.

Nothing immediately was determined to be missing, Jonas said.

The glove compartment and console also were rifled, an officer said. Edward L. Hubbard, 21, of the 2400 block of Center Street, again nothing of value appeared to be missing.

Not all the owners of vehicles which appeared to have been entered had filed police reports, Selph said Wednesday morning.

Plan would expand drug fight

"While it is important for police to keep the pressure on those who violate our drug laws, it is absolutely vital that prosecutors, the courts and state and local correctional agencies be able to respond to the unprecedented growth in drug cases."

—J. David Coldren

"The increase in federal funds won't solve Illinois' drug abuse problem, but it will allow us to continue many worthwhile programs and expand into important new areas such as demand reduction, user accountability and nuisance abatement," Coldren said. "The increase in funds also means we'll be able to do a better job of collecting data about drug abuse and crime, and evaluating the success of different approaches to the problem," he said.

Approximately two-thirds of the federal funds ($10.6 million) will go to local units of government, and about one-third ($5.4 million) to state agencies. The authority will use 5 percent of the money (about $43,000) for program administration — only half the 10 percent allowed for administration under the federal law. Every three federal dollars must be matched by one local or state dollar.

Selective Service dates noted

Young men who will turn 26 in 1990 will be reaching an important milestone, according to the Selective Service System.

Selective Service Illinois State Director Richard E. Northern, warned that with few exceptions, a man who fails to register to permanent for his Selective Service registration becomes ineligible for certain benefits such as federal student aid, job training and most federal employment in addition to facing possible prosecution as a felon.

Selective Service does not have the authority to accept late registrations after a man reaches his 26th birthday.

Some states also require registration for state student aid, entrance to state supported colleges and universities, state employment and permission to practice law.

Illinois is one of those states. Illinois' legislation, passed in January 1984, requires Selective Service registration for student aid and became effective the same year. Illinois' legislation passed in 1989 requires Selective Service registration for state employment and becomes effective Jan. 1, 1990.

Men aged 18 through 25 who have not yet registered can avoid the risk by registering at any local post office. Failure to register is a felony punishable by a fine of up to $250,000 up to five years in prison, or both.

The program serves troubled students.

"I think we have been vindicated by the success reported," Madison Superintendent of Schools Dan Kostencki said in response to Hamm's comments.

Unions' gripe ridiculous

Let an honest person try to contribute a little something to his community, and someone selfish tries to make it a mess.

That's how we view the situation between Teamsters Local 525, Laborers Local 397, the city of Granite City and the owner of Don's Hardware store in downtown.

With the full support of City Hall, Don Caughron recently hired men to clean up around the downtown area. On the surface that was a noble gesture from a small-businessman.

But the picture quickly became distorted when Don's workers spread out over the downtown area and ended up in front of the city street department on Adams Street. The moment they started cleaning up that area, union members of the street department squawked that their work was being infringed upon. Further, they accused the men of trying to embarrass them in front of their own building.

The cleanup crew quickly backed off, but that wasn't good enough. The shop steward for the Teamsters filed a grievance against the city this week, saying the city authorized someone other than the union street workers to clean the streets. The Laborers filed a less formal complaint.

What a bunch of crybabies.

When we printed the first story on this subject Jan. 28, everyone (the mayor, street department superintendent, union business agents) left us with the impression that this was no more than a good deed gone awry. Everyone was willing to write it off as an error in judgment. Caughron himself never anticipated his workers going out of the immediate downtown area.

But some of the street department workers persisted, saying that cleaning the streets is their job. Using this logic, what is to stop them from also whining about someone cleaning a gutter in front of his own house? His own store?

If the unions really cared about this issue, you could bet there would be a lot more clean streets than there are in Granite City.

Jobs at risk? C'mon! Every single person in Granite City could get out and pick junk out of the street and there would still be plenty of work left for our street department.

We realize the liability implications; someone could get hurt in such volunteer service. That more important issue seems to have been lost in the hullabaloo over jobs.

The city's street crews have participated for years in the annual cleanup that draws hundreds of volunteers to main thoroughfares, and we've never heard a complaint until now.

When someone like Don Caughron cares enough to pay out of his own pocket for such a cleanup, he should be given respect, not scorn.

The grievance is scheduled to be heard next week, and we encourage all parties to dismiss it as frivolous.

Keep Bernaix as fire chief

Charlie Bernaix will no longer be Granite City fire chief after May 1, if the current persistent rumors can be believed. Mayor Von Dee Cruse, who semi-publicly shopped around the idea of firing Bernaix many times in the past year, is not expected to reappoint Bernaix when his term ends in May.

What has Bernaix done wrong as fire chief?

Well, for one thing, he insisted on having the aerial fire truck undergo its mandatory inspection, knowing full well it would fail. Then he insisted it be repaired — even though the mayor said there were only three buildings in town tall enough to merit it.

One of those buildings, Bernaix told the aldermen over the mayor's objections, is St. Elizabeth Medical Center.

A list of his transgressions could go on and on, but they all would have one thing in common — Charlie Bernaix does not ignore problems in his department just because they might be expensive or embarrassing.

Mayor Cruse has undoubtedly made up his mind already, but it's a sad world when courage, dedication, ambition and honesty are perceived as character flaws in public servants.

Conventioneers have asset

If I were a Moose, Elk, teacher, social worker, calendar maker, retailer or member of Plumbers Local 47-Dash-A, I'd be looking really hard at Collinsville, Ill.

You know, Collinsville, that little town of 21,000 just up Interstate 255, seems Kahok-town pulled off one of its biggest coups last week when it opened its $7 million Gateway Center. Collinsville may soon be renamed Convention City.

Illinois' newest convention facility got off to a rousing start during two days of dedication last week, the first for important people (the business elite) and the second for the general public. And while I doubt that the jazz band that was on hand last week will be around to greet every tourist who finds his way to No. 1 Gateway, December 1990 can bet Collinsville's celebration will be a long and continuous one.

The 60,000-square-foot center includes an 18,000-square-foot exposition hall, seven meeting rooms, a 10,000-square-foot administrative offices. It's designed for conferences, conventions, exhibitions and trade shows.

At least count 40 events had already been scheduled for the facility, and it's not even finished. A convention center is only the beginning of Phase 1 of the project; Phase 2 is under way and will include a kitchen and banquet meeting room.

Gateway hardly the Cervantes Convention Center of downtown St. Louis. It is less than half the size, but it's still far bigger than anything else Illinois has got south of Springfield. Promoters say it's not in competition with Convention because there are far too many fish to catch to worry about landing only the big ones.

Among them: bridal shows, woodworking exhibits, knife displays, Indian artifact shows and a Star Trek convention. Bigger shows are still to come, and a schedule is normally done years in advance. In its first month of operation, the Gateway Center is expected to attract nearly 17,000 people.

The sprawler end will have Collinsville's neighbors envious:

Business should grow for neighboring hotels, restaurants and related entities.

The Collingsville project wasn't overnight. One Mr. Gene Broome, first proposed a convention district in his community six years ago. A few months later a bill to form a Collingsville convention authority was proposed in the Illinois House. It was eventually passed by the Assembly and signed by Gov. James Thompson in July 1984.

Major developments in ensuing years included appointment of a convention authority board; naming it the Gateway Center; the council's approved use of the city's motel tax fund to help fund the center; certification of eligibility for state funding to purchase part of the land and approval of bonds to help finance part of the building.

All of this goes to show what a town's leaders can do when they put their heads together and cooperate. Convention didn't get the Gateway Center without some dog fights between factions. But it's got it. That's what counts.

Sees our Bill of Rights under rifle 'assault'

To the editor:

In these troubled times, we are dominated by an all-out media blitz dedicated to abusing the tragedies such as Patrick Purdy's "assault rifle" attack on school children in Stockton, Calif.

There has been a flood of anti-gun legislation since that and other attacks. There are laws and restrictions on the sale of guns and "automatic assault rifles." I would quote a bumper sticker I have seen, "When guns are outlawed, only outlaws will have guns."

The front page headline may have read differently, had versions of Handgun Control Inc. the coalition to stop gun violence and the major media's single minded hatred of the NRA and private gun owning citizens, won passage.

The person or persons that armed themselves for the home invasion of Brian and Hope Richardson's home in Mitchell and the other two did not care about gun laws or any laws.

If the NRA, personal letters to lawmakers, telephone calls and letters to newspapers and responses to biased attacks from television, radio and print had slowed down and stopped the flood of gun ban legislation, Brian forced to handover his guns to the law.

When the home intruder opened fire, Brian was able to return fire upon the intruder and prevent a much more tragic front page headline.

Anti-gun lobbyists have stated, "If all guns are removed, crime could not exist." This statement is true. They will use baseball bats, pipes, knives, rocks or any other weapons that man has used throughout history to mercilessly slaughter other men.

Our Constitutional Bill of Rights is intended to put certain freedoms beyond the ebb and flow of events. I would like to believe that statement of rights are enough to protect them. I know that they are not. Benjamin Franklin told us, "We were given a republic, if we could keep it."

Freedom is a continuing struggle, and the fight to "keep it" required as much input and participation by the citizens, as it has throughout the decades before. But it's worth it.

Just ask Brian Richardson about his second amendment right to keep and bare arms. I believe when that right falls, all others will follow.

People need to show more tolerance for pets

To the editor:

One reason that man was put here on earth by God was to tend the earth that he created. Someone else needed here to help to take care of God's creation — the animals.

Now I know that everyone is not an animal lover, but I am. I don't expect everyone to fawn over cats and dogs the way I do, but I don't appreciate people who cruelty to animals.

I live out in the Nameoki Township area on a street called Vine. I have three cats and a dog.

Last summer, I found two of my cats poisoned. One was already dead and I found him and the other one died a violent, convulsive death a day later.

Previous to that, my husband and I found our cat dead. We found it was Alaskan Malamute because he became a "nuisance" according to the neighbors.

Recently, I returned from the Nameoki Township Building where I worked on one of the cats. Because of complaints, he had been picked up. My other cat was already at the Rabies Control Office in Edwardsville. I had to pay $20 to get him out.

Why I'm asking this: Why can't people be a little more tolerant of others? My husband and I always try to help out our neighbors when we can. When other people in the neighborhood met lose, we catch them and hold them until our neighbors return to retrieve them. We even took in a stray dog that was lost and its owner was never found. For those trained in animal care, you know how an injured animal can become violent due to pain, so we took a risk. We try to be good neighbors, but obviously there are some individuals in our area who do not try to reciprocate.

We love our animals. We dearly miss our two cats that were cruelly and unjustly poisoned. Anybody who is not working the street in the rain the other night, calling for my cats, could see how much I love them.

I know that animals can be pests sometimes, getting into trash, walking on cars, etc. But please remember that they are just that — animals. Humans are supposed to be the smarter species. Sometimes I wonder.

If people please call us and will take action of what's wrong. We can't afford to get them out of the pound every week and it's hard to explain to a two-year old child what death is and why their kitties aren't around anymore.

We don't want to become unpleasant grouch neighbors, but if others treat us badly, what can they expect?

Concerned over GC environmental pollution

To the editor:

I am concerned about the pollution here in the Granite City area and what it's doing to our land, air, water, people, and their possessions.

My first concern is the people. They are the most important ones that are affected by pollution. To name a few problems: respiratory problems causing lung cancer; brain damage, skin and stomach problems; and eye and nerve damage. People going to affect their babies, causing them to have premature deaths, miscarried and have birth defects.

Because this pollution is damaging our environment, we will not leave a quality life for our kids. It's destroying our buildings, making them unsafe. Kills off fish and birds. Our trees have to work harder to produce more oxygen. Most of all it's destroying our ozone layer.

By contaminating water, we plenty more problems with pollution which makes our homes and Granite City look dirty.

We should stop pollution, because one of the reasons above and more. We need to keep our earth as nice as can be so we have a future.

Owning home a struggle

To the editor:

We all know who they are. People who believe for them selves to make a small project in renting houses.

Many who illegally do not even claim their rental income property to the IRS at tax time. Most who live out and away from home, area when they rent their property.

And who suffers? We who have struggled to obtain the "American Dream" of owning a house.

On my block there are several houses to the disgrace of the neighborhood. Overrun with cats and dogs digging in the yard.

People who live in these houses couldn't upgrade them if they wanted to. Why? Because these same landlords (from Columbus) simply won't invest and only care about their monthly renter's fee. And these owners of rental property are impossible to reach.

The renters themselves I feel sorry for. We used to rent. But they often forget in their righteousness that some of us own our property.

Thus as homeowners we can't readily move our herd of dogs and find another place to live unless we do. So, we as property owners display much more tolerance to each other and much more pride in our homes, no matter how much.

Maybe it is because I grew up in a middle class neighborhood than where I ended up owning a home. Growing up in Rock Hill, of Crestwood, and now owning a house in Madison is hardly a compliment to success. But all in all, I own my home. I am faced with being harassed, hassled, and watching my neighborhood literally taken over by the dogs.

The rest of my family has seen this problem, and realize the hopelessness after 10 years. They live in the same neighborhood. And when they leave to move. And as we try to afford a newer house in a better neighborhood we are financially left with but one last decision — "rent" our old home.

Whole Language

Lessons: 'Grabbing the teachable moment'

By Meg Tebo
Staff writer

GRANITE CITY — The concept is simple, yet novel.

Several teachers at Parkview School no longer break up the school day into individual units of mathematics, science and English. Today, they are teaching a series of cohesive lessons to cover each subject as part of a greater whole.

Students are being taught much the same way they learned to communicate and understand as toddlers — by absorbing all the words and fitting them together as a whole.

Educators call it "grabbing the teachable moment."

The program is called Whole Language and it increasingly is being considered an innovative approach to putting American education back on track toward achievement.

Among the teachers at Parkview School in Granite City using the Whole Language approach is Phyllis Talley.

In one recent 45-minute period, her third-grade class touched on geography, mathematics, history, English, research, spelling, grammar, punctuation, memory recall and, of course, reading. The lesson was about Abraham Lincoln's White House.

"Where can we find Washington, D.C.?" asked Talley.

A boy approached the map and pointed to Washington state. Another boy was called on to help. He found the right coast, but couldn't locate the city. Finally, a girl joined the search and found the capital. "What do you know about the White House?" Talley then asked the group.

Hands shot up.

"It was once called the Presidential Palace," said one.

"The address is 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.," said another.

"It has 132 rooms and 20 bathrooms," offered another.

"It burned in ... 1814," said a boy.

"What war was being fought when the White House was burned and who was that war against?" asked Talley.

Murmurs among the students, some puzzled looks, and finally someone said, "The War of 1812, against the British."

"How many years ago was 1812?" asked Talley.

And so it went with the lesson incorporating elements from all fields of study.

In more traditional methods of teaching, instructors would not have had the freedom to incorporate all such elements into one lesson. There were a time for math, a time for geography, a time for history, and very little overlap between subjects.

The big plus here is that we're not tied to a rigid curriculum. We have that freedom and flexibility. It's good to feel that they (the administration) trust us as professionals," said Loretta Woolbright, a fourth-grade teacher at Parkview.

"Who can find Washington, D.C.?" asked Talley.

A boy approached the map and pointed to Washington state. Another boy was called on to help. He found the right coast, but couldn't locate the

"You get to know your

THIRD GRADERS at Parkview School participate in a students better and get more involved with them," added Mary Morgan, who teaches fifth grade.

An integral facet of the Whole Language classroom is that students do some sort of writing exercise every day, usually tied to the rest of the day's lessons.

There is a great deal of freedom on subject matter and approach, and students are encouraged to use their imaginations. Morgan's fifth graders, for instance, wrote, scripted, designed and acted in television commercials, which were then videotaped for the class.

This circular approach, where excitement about reading leads to the desire to write, and writing leads to students sharing their works with each other, is the catalyst to keeping students — and teachers — interested in learning, say the program's proponents.

"To hear a sixth grader say, 'I love to read now, but I hated it before' — what more can you ask for?" asked sixth-grade teacher Barb Varadian.

Preliminary results gauging the success of Whole Language in the classroom seem to suggest that test scores improve. Teachers caution, however, that the impact will be more long range.

"One year of this type of learning may not make much difference, but if a student is exposed to this for two or three years, he or she will see the concepts of researching become second nature and the habit of reading is set. As adults, they will want to continue to read," said Morgan.

"The key to this program is that it's starting from the bottom, with teachers getting excited first, and that excitement spreading upward through the administrators, rather than the administration saying to teachers, 'This is the way you will do things,'" said first-grade teacher Carole Locke.

"Kids are different these days. They know more about the world and we have to meet their needs," Varadian said.

There's a sign on Parkview Principal Nancy Marti's office wall that seems to sum up the teachers' views. It says: "If they don't learn the way you teach them, teach them the way they learn."

... a writer looks back

Staff writer Meg Tebo called upon her own experiences to compare two different types of education, basal and Whole Language.

When I was in the fifth grade, I used to sneak into the school library during my lunch hour. I'd choose a book from the shelves, sit down and read it in a bookcase to avoid detection, and lose myself in another world for a while.

Then, one day, the librarian came back early and caught me. I don't remember the specifics of the punishment, but I do remember getting kicked off of the student-librarian squad.

Even then, I knew there was something wrong with a system that would punish a kid for preferring to read a book rather than run around outside.

There's a time and a place for everything, so they say, but instead of explaining that to me, the powers that be chose to punish me.

Later, when I was in college, I took a class that was recommended to me as both easier and interesting. It was the first education approach I'd heard of. It was the first time I'd heard of tracking. In that study was an evaluation of the "tracking" system of education.

In the tracking system, children are grouped into levels based on how quickly they learn. The inevitable result is a universal recognition of who are the "smart" kids, the "average" kids and the "dumb" or "slow" kids. The real tragedy is that these labels, once applied in about the first grade, stick with students throughout their school career.

Thus, the smart kids gain a sort of arrogance about their presumed superiority, the average kids learn not to aspire to more than average grades (or careers) and the slow kids, most tragically of all, begin to see themselves as life's losers and that they just can't cut it.

The virtual absence of the tracking system is what I find so intriguing about the Whole Language concept.

Faster students learn the topic in-depth by helping to teach it to their peers, and other students learn with less pressure from a peer than directly from a teacher. Each student is able to gain from the ideas put forth by others in a less competitive, non-threatening environment.

Teachers involved in the program say the biggest thrill for them is watching students get excited about reading; the students get excited because they have greater freedom in choosing what they will read.

And, the cooperative atmosphere encourages sharing that excitement about reading inevitably leads to the desire to create — to write.

In the Whole Language concept, the ideas take precedence over the form. The student's imagination is allowed to create at will, and things such as grammar, spelling and punctuation are considered only after the form is on paper.

This means ... After all, you wouldn't paint the trim on your house before you paint the walls, would you?

Just as children learn to speak by listening and mimicking older human beings, so too they learn to read and to write by reading, and then by writing.

The idea becomes their own, and the final product is something of which they can be personally proud. What better motivation can there be than the satisfaction of a meaningful job well done?

LORI PHILLIPS is engrossed in a book during Reading Hour in a fifth grade classroom at Parkview.

rather than products to be tested.

Achievement is based on how well students can gain information from a variety of sources in a purposeful and meaningful manner and whether or not they do so.

Note: According to U.S. Department of Education statistics, the U.S. ranks 49th in world literacy. New Zealand, where 98 percent of all classrooms employ the Whole Language concept, ranks first.

Whole Language is ...

The following is excerpted from a letter to parents from a Whole Language teacher explaining the concept from the classroom instructor's point-of-view.

"Many teachers across the U.S. have been moving toward Whole Language instruction in their classrooms during the past few years.

Whole Language is not a method of teaching reading or any particular program or set of materials. It is a philosophy or way of thinking about how children learn language.

Unlike the traditional reader program, Whole Language is based on the assumption that children learn written language (reading and writing) in much the same way that they learned oral language (speaking and listening).

There are certain conditions that operate in a child's environment when he or she is learning to speak. Whole Language teachers try to duplicate those same conditions for learning to read and write.

Whole Language embraces the concept of "language across the curriculum" meaning that no matter what content subjects are being taught (history, geography, science, health, etc.), reading and writing are incorporated into the instruction.

Materials consist of any meaningful print: library books, magazines, newspapers, textbooks, encyclopedias, dictionaries, etc.

There is no ability grouping for instruction. Children work together in large groups, small groups, pairs or individually.

There is no labeling or compilation of students. Whole Language teachers recognize that students learn at different rates and in different ways.

Teachers see themselves as facilitators whose job it is to make learning easy and interesting rather than technicians following the prescribed instructions of a basal reader program.

Reading and writing are viewed as processes to be learned

THIS FALL in Europe, it appeared to us that more than half of all the cars were painted white.

Why this was, I don't know, but it was the direct opposite of Henry Ford's long-ago pledge that "you can have a car any color you want as long as it's black."

Brightly-colored autos are said to sell best during good economic times, while plain vehicles are preferred during recession.

Bill Winter

NEARLY ALL the autos we saw in Europe were of compact size, due to the $3 a gallon fuel prices, the heavy traffic volume and the small dimensions of most streets and parking spaces.

There were cars of all sizes at this year's St. Louis show, and a lot of the vehicles were spacious enough to be considered for domestic use; they wouldn't be practical overseas.

THE VARIOUS MODELS were great, and the cars weren't bad, either.

It must be a boost to a woman's ego to be hired to stand by one of the auto's chance to wear one's best formal dress (or miniskirt for sports cars) and to help attract admiring crowds from rival displays.

I don't know if any of the hostesses were from Ed McMahon's TV "Star Search," but they certainly were pretty, and pretty articulate.

Some just opened car doors on rotating stages; others gave detailed explanations of automotive design and performance.

PRICES OF NEW CARS have been rising much faster than inflation and any advances in production.

You could almost see the tears as visitors scanned windows and underwent "sticker shock."

Of course, as yacht builders say, "If you have to ask the price, you can't afford it."

NEGATIVES were noted. Many cars had too little back seat legroom and too little headroom. Trunk space often was inadequate, and there were painted bumpers that didn't look durable.

There were price tags soaring into $30,000 range, and only a few below $3,000.

But most visitors seemed pleased by the handiwork of the American, Japanese, German, British, Swedish and Korean car designers.

SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS included the brand-new Nissan Infiniti and Toyota Lexus.

I'll admit I got behind the steering wheel of the Infiniti in January of 1989, and in the years of buying autos I've never bought one made not in the USA.

Nearly all the domestic companies showed off "cars of the future," including a startlingly different Plymouth Slingshot.

sassy innovations on the Pontiac Stinger, Dodge Viper and Ford Splash, and a dazzling sleek Cadillac Soltis.

DON JOHNSTON Chrysler-Dodge of Granite City was among the exhibitors.

Other cars of interest in the Granite City area, including Chevrolet, Ford and Oldsmobile, also drew much attention.

Still other displays included Buick, Acura, Peugeot, BMW, Jaguar, Honda, Lincoln, Volkswagen, GMC, Isuzu, Mercury, Subaru, Volvo, Hyundai, Jeep, Suzuki, Eagle, Saab, Rolls Royce, Mazda, Alfa Romeo, Geo, Audi, Mitsubishi and Mercedes-Benz.

And let's not forget the new and old Chevy Corvettes, nor the highlight for many youngsters, Ghostbuster Ecto 1, complete with a ghost and a uniformed ghostbuster.

Sparkling 1990 cars cause smiles but their prices bring tears

Somewhat like jewelry beneath its glass, stored cars at the eighth annual Auto Show sparkled brilliantly in the Cervantes Center lighting.

We visited the show Saturday and it was undeniably a big hit with bi-state families.

THE HIGHLY POLISHED, the 1990 vehicles and future-concept cars remained immaculate throughout the five-day event.

The crowds were encouraged to touch, inspect and marvel at the cars, vans and trucks while salesmen tirelessly wiped away the fingerprints.

As the auto-show section in the Jan. 31 Granite City Journal, the public was welcome to "slam our doors, kick our tires, batten our hatches and be totally blown away."

All of that happened.

replacement is Capt. Jerry Wallace, said to be a close friend of City Attorney Mark Goldenberg, one of Cruse's closest supporters.

Cruse was asked if he would replace Bernaix with Wallace.

"I don't know," Cruse said. "But I do know I'm going to be reviewing all my appointments in May."

He was asked whether he was satisfied with Bernaix's performance as chief since Cruse appointed him to replace retired chief Joe Holder in July 1988.

"I haven't anything to say right now about anybody's performance," Cruse said.

Several aldermen have heard the rumors and one thinks it is time to put an end to them.

Virgil Kambarian, chairman of the City Council's Fire and Water Committee, said, "I think if he (Cruse) is unhappy with the chief, then he should say so, rather than leaving him dangling."

But Kambarian said he had "mixed feelings" about the matter. "Charlie's been our fire chief, but it's up to the board when it comes to his appointments."

Kambarian added that he "was a little perplexed" when Cruse appointed Bernaix in the first place, "because he had been president of the union."

St. Louis Alderman Judy Whitaker, past chairman of the Fire and Water Committee, said the rumors had been swirling for "almost a year." Whitaker said she doesn't know why Cruse would not reappoint Bernaix.

"He doesn't want to know what he did," Whitaker said.

Kambarian said he heard Wallace's name, as well as other names, mentioned as possible replacements for Bernaix. He declined to name the others.

"I don't believe in rumors, I believe in facts," said 3rd Ward

Alderman Andy Timko, who is also on the Fire and Water Committee. "I haven't heard nothing. I think (Bernaix) is all right, but that's up to the mayor to decide."

Timko said, however, that if Bernaix is not reappointed, "I'd like to see them go out of town to get somebody."

Kambarian said he would not guess at what Cruse will do, indeed, was reluctant to comment.

"I don't want to add fuel to the fire and force anybody into doing anything," Kambarian said.

The current firefighter's union president is Art Asadorian, described as "a good man."

If Bernaix were replaced as chief, he could resume his previous job as captain, the rank he held when he was appointed assistant fire chief in June 1988, then chief two months later.

thought there were "a lot of positive things about it (consolidation.)"

The eight-man study committee will consist of three representatives from each council plus two representatives appointed by the president of the North Central Region of the Boy Scouts of America.

The representatives from the Cahokia council are John Frut, Carl Wetzel and John Tarppoff, said Winkler. The representatives from the Piasa council are Dennis Sweet, Frank Akers and Bennie Harris, said Thompson.

The two representatives from the regional body have not been appointed yet, said Regional Director Tom Ford.

Winkler said the study committee would probably report its findings within three months. But Ford said, based on previous experience with consolidations, the study might take as long as six months.

If both boards disapprove consolidation "becomes a dead issue," he said.

Or, the executive boards could conditionally approve consolidation but ask the study committee to study the matter further to clarify some more.

If both councils approve a recommendation for consolidation, the issue then goes before each council's governing body, called Council Members.

This body consists of the members of the executive board plus a representative from each chartering organization. Again, a simple majority is required.

In the case of the Cahokia

Mound Council, the executive board and about 80 chartering organizations. (A few organizations charter more than one unit.) There are 73 chartering organizations in the region.

If one council's governing body disapproves and the other doesn't, the committee might be asked to reconsider the terms of the proposed consolidation at a later time. "Although, technically, at that point it's dead," Winkler said.

If both boards disapprove consolidation "becomes a dead issue," he said.

The councils are roughly the same size. Cahokia Mound Council has 3,292 youth in 88 units. Piasa Bird Council has 2,664 youth in 90 units.

Scout councils are classed in five groupings, according to size.

The smallest council is a class 20, the largest is a class 56. Both Cahokia and Piasa are class 51.

By comparison, the St. Louis Area Council is a 56, and the Okaw Valley Council of Belleville is a 53.

The consolidated Cahokia-Piasa council would be a class 52. Consolidation of the two councils has been talked about intermittently for the last 20 years, Winkler said.

Regional Director Ford said there were "quite a number" of consolidations in the late 60s-early 70s but few since then.

"We don't encourage it unless the parties involved initiate the action," Ford said.

The study committee will consider a multitude of factors, including cost, including the financial condition of each council, tax consequences and corporate legal requirements.

Individual scoutmasters will have no say in the decision, Winkler said, except for whatever influence they may have with the representative of their chartering organization to the council members.

There are about four million scouts in the nation and one million adult volunteers, Ford said. There are six regions, with slightly more than 400 councils.

The North Central Region, covering all of 10 states and part of Illinois, has about 450,000 scouts in 43 councils.

who had been trying to get a photo of the cleanup effort for a couple of days. Some street department members believed an attempt was being made to embarrass them.

Both Teamsters Local 525 and Laborers Local 397, which represent street department employees, complained Caughran's crew was taking up too much of the street. Caughran agreed, and instructed his crew to stay out of the streets.

The Teamster grievance alleges that, because Street Superintendent Mac Wadell and Mayor Von Dr. Cruse knew about Caughran's original plan, the city "directed" non-union workers to do a job which the union is under contract to do. It asks the union be paid for the work done by Caughran's crew.

"I just don't know you can say the city directed anyone to do anything," Wadell said. "I'm going to deny the grievance."

Wadell said the Laborers had filed a complaint on the same subject.

"If (the grievance) is true, where is it going to stop?" Wadell asked. "Are they going to file a grievance every time anyone sweeps the street in front of their house? I think it's ridiculous."

A grievance meeting with the city's Negotiation Committee is scheduled for Monday night.

adopted by the committee Wednesday.

However, Wadell said following the Wednesday meeting, he does not know if he will speak in support of the plan or not. When it comes to the floor at the Feb. 21 board meeting, Wadell had sought a different version that would have included the creation of a decision-making solid waste panel comprised of municipal, township and county officials.

"I don't think I'm going to know how to vote on this until the board meeting," Wadell said.

Wednesday's meeting followed a stormy session last week, when Wadell refused to recognize a motion to adopt the plan. The city's Negotiation Committee appealed the decision. That refusal prompted three members of the committee to walk out of the meeting.

Moreover, Wadell said, the plan does not say what criteria would have to be met to establish a new landfill site and doesn't say whether there would be limits to the importation of trash from out of the area and out of state.

Those were key issues in a $350,000, long-range plan produced for Madison, St. Clair and Monroe counties by the East-West Gateway Coordinating Council. Portions of that plan are incorporated in the plan.

Wadell said calling for representation on a solid waste panel from each municipality and township in the county would have "created a dialogue that does not now exist," allowing a free flow of information and ideas concerning solid waste issues from all levels of government.

But D. Edwardsville criticized such a concept as being too cumbersome.

"I don't know how you'd ever get a consensus out of 50 people when we can't even reach an agreement on the first," Stile said, referring to infighting on the environmental control committee.

The solid waste plan accepted by the committee is Wadell's, who said that some areas of concern — including landfill matters — were not addressed in order to keep the plan flexible.

That refusal prompted three members of the committee to walk out of the meeting.

Wadell said that his previous calling for representation on a solid waste panel from each municipality and township in the county would have "created a

"That's the ultimate goal," Stile said, since the state has mandated the county to initiate a recycling program as a means of reducing solid waste.

He said that private recycling programs have gathered underway in Edwardsville and Glen Carbon, haulers have found themselves awash in newspaper and are having to pay to have the paper hauled to a plant in St. Louis.

"If we're facing these kinds of problems with only two municipalities, what are we going to do when all 23 townships in the county have recycling programs?" Stile said.

Two separate companies have said they would be willing to come into the county and set up trash-to-energy incinerators, Stile said.

The only hitch in such a plan is that the county must be able to guarantee a 300-ton-per-day traffic crash into the facilities, a commitment the county is presently not able to make, Stile said.

Free-speech demand gives cable problem

The people who run the Cencom cable systems had a problem last week they surely didn't want. One wonders if the approach will solve it.

Jerry Betts, who said he lives in St. Louis County, applied for access to the cable system for programming produced by what he identified as "a white supremacist organization," said Jay Allen, a spokesman for Cencom.

The application said the purpose of the program, "Race and Reason," is "free speech for what a majority of listeners."

Betts could not be reached for comment.

The application applied only to the Cencom network in north St. Louis County, which covers Florissant, Black Jack, Spanish Fork and parts of unincorporated north county, Allen said. Cencom also operates systems in west and south county.

In a statement issued Friday, Cencom rejected the request, saying that Betts, who applied to provide a political point of view on their public access system in Florissant, gave on his application an address in Breckenridge Hills. That made him ineligible for the access on the Cencom public access system, which, under a Florissant ordinance, is restricted to residents according to the Cencom statement.

However, in a certified letter sent to Betts Friday, the company noted that Betts was not a subscriber as he had indicated on an application for air time and that Breckenridge Hills is not within Cencom's service area.

Allen said Friday the company

Ian

will be glad to accept any further applications for time on the public access channel and that all applications would be properly processed.

Cencom's statement added, "Program content was not a factor in the denial of Mr. Betts' application."

That might be the case. But the decision on the residency requirement has sidelined a larger question. Still left undressed is one of the strengths of American free society: the situation where the rights of some Americans appear to conflict with the rights of others.

For instance, how can you tell citizens that they have a right to present a political point of view on cable television even when the politics to be presented are so repugnant that they soil the minds of everyone within range of the signal?

Maybe Cencom's first reaction was "I'm not going to put that filth on the air." But sensible people think before they act, and someone at Cencom no doubt said, "Oh, we've got a problem."

A basic premise of the cable system structure (and our whole society) is that it is supposed to further a free exchange of ideas. And it is. It is not, white supremacists do present ideas. Hitler did, too. And Stalin. If Hitler and Stalin wanted access time on cable in the 1990s, it's hard to see how they could be turned down.

The only reasonable answer, providing all the public access system's guidelines are followed, is to give the organization time on the air and hope that nobody will like to hear racism.

There is, however, a consolation. Anyone who can be corrupted by that stuff already probably has been. After all, you don't have to watch television to be exposed to bigots. Unfortunately, it's all around us.

I always have thought that Ted Koppel, on ABC's "Nightline," was just about the toughest guy on the block. He never seemed to let anything get in the way of telling the story to the audience. Well, he's still great, but he is not without flaws.

As you may have noted in the national media, Washington D.C., television station WJLA, an ABC affiliate, reported practically on the eve of the Super Bowl that the National Basketball League's enforcement of its drug policy has racist overtones. The story charged that black players who tested positive for drugs were publicly disciplined, while the same quarterbacks who tested positive were not identified or disciplined.

The station reported that it had the names of the three quarterbacks, and that they "or their agents" admitted that the players had tested positive.

But the story did not identify the players, not only damaging the credibility of the report but apparently practicing the same kind of racism that it accused the league of doing.

And even tough-as-nails Koppe, following up on the story Jan. 25 on "Nightline," broadcast on KTVI-TV (Channel 2) failed to ask the WJLA reporter to identify the quarterbacks.

For starters. Please let it be an oversight. Don't let me think it was because the story came from an ABC affiliate.

KMOV-TV (Channel 4) has been lambasted for its "Nightline" show just about the toughest guy on the block. He never seemed to let anything get in the way of telling the story to the audience. Well, he's still great, but he is not without flaws.

While that's good news for Channel 4, it's bad news for CBS, which apparently is desperate to try to pop up the Seják show while casting about for a replacement.

Hall may look like the obvious answer for CBS, but his program is syndicated (by Paramount) and is tied up in various contractual arrangements around the country. A lot of them with non-CBS stations.

ERIC CLAPTON is more relaxed, energized.

Outside sources make Clapton a 'Journeymen'

Eric Clapton seemed to coast through his last few albums.

He had decent songs — such as "Tearing Us Apart" and "Forever Man" — but this was not the kind of prime material that could justify a boxed set of his music, such as the much-heralded "Crossroads" from 1988.

To really hear Clapton at his best, you need to go back to his self-titled debut or "461 Ocean Blvd." and his preceding work with Cream, Derek and the Dominos, Blind Faith and the Yardbirds.

But those who have felt Clapton's best work was well behind him will find themselves rethinking that notion after hearing his latest release, "Journeyman."

Clapton sounds more relaxed and energized on the album than he has on his other recent records. Nowhere is this more evident than when he covers two early rock 'n' roll classics — "How Dog" and "Before You Accuse Me."

While some artists would sound self-conscious in attempting these songs, Clapton approaches them in a playful birdey.

Clapton made this a fine move by selecting strong outside material, having the intention to reshape the songs into his own and performing the music with heart and energy.

Lady Warriors cruise by Shells in 1st round

EAST ST. LOUIS — As expected, the Lady Warriors' first step through the post-season semifinals was an comfortable one. Granite City jumped out to a 28-3 halftime lead and demolished Roxane 55-27 in the East St. Louis Regional on Tuesday.

The Lady Warriors (17-5) will face East St. Louis at 7:30 p.m. Friday at 7:30 for the regional championship and a berth in the Highland Sectional next week. The front line of Jennifer Cavaness, Priscilla Mendenhall and Kim Pawlak makes for 12 points, although Granite City got only four points from starting guards Kim Pawlak and Addie Lenzi.

GRANITE CITY: Cavaness 28 (15 rebounds), Sykes 8, Mendenhall 6, Pawlak 5, Lenzi 4, Jones 3, H. Jones 2, P. Mendenhall 2 (6 assists), FG-28, FT-3, PF-6.

Granite City's 12-1 lead beat East St. Louis for the second straight year in the regional championship. Although the Tigelettes' record looks bad, East Side has won its last three games, the best since Oct. 29.

Tuesday's second game as Sheila Jones scored 21 points and Jennifer Jones added 17.

The big surprise came in the Belleville West Regional where Belleville West (17-6) beat Marion 49-37. East trailed most of the game, but Kelly Higgins' basket with just under two minutes to go gave the Lancers the lead. The Maroons came back to tie the Lancers with 17 points while Jenny Bourne led West (23-3) with 17 points.

The Maroons beat the Lady Warriors three times this year and had beaten East twice by a totals of 28 points. But West coach Larry Betz admitted his team might have been looking ahead to the regional with unbeaten East St. Louis Lincoln.

The Tigelettes (19-0) crushed the O'Fallon 65-20 as Raquel Ramson, who edged past Cavaness for the area scoring lead last week, had 21 points. Granite

City's 12-1 lead beat the Lady Warriors three times this year and had beaten East twice by a total of 28 points. But West coach Larry Betz admitted his team might have been looking ahead to the regional with unbeaten East St. Louis Lincoln.

The Tigelettes (19-0) crushed the Madison Trojans for the Madison Area semifinals. The Madisonians led 32-27 at halftime, but were outscored 48-21 in the final 16 minutes.

Now, the scoring statistics for last Thursday's game against Cahokia were listed incorrectly in Sunday's edition. Priscilla Meyenburg led the Lady Warriors with 18 points and 12 rebounds.

S.M. Wilson awarded press contract

GRANITE CITY — S.M. Wilson and Co. has been awarded a $350,000 design/build contract to construct a warehouse addition that will enlarge the Suburban Newspapers printing facilities in north St. Louis County by 50 percent.

Scheduled for completion in March 1990, the 20,000-square-foot addition is being constructed on a fast-track schedule to accommodate the delivery of new equipment.

"The expansion will also allow us to consolidate some of the materials from our leased space in north St. Louis County to the Berkeley facility," said Tom Rice, vice president and general manager of Suburban Newspapers.

The single-story, pre-engineered metal Warr-Pruett building will share a 100-foot-long common wall with the existing facility, where several of the area's Suburban Journal newspapers are printed.

Oates takes over area Vollmer operations

Daniel Greenbaum, senior partner of Vollmer Associates, has announced the transfer of ownership of its Illinois office to Vollmer Associates, a management company managed by David M. Oates. Oates has been director of Vollmer's Midwest operations. The transfer became official on Jan. 1.

Greenbaum said the decision was brought about by the continued growth of the Illinois operation and the development of independent management and technical staff in Illinois.

In keeping with the partnership's commitment to shared participation in all areas of Vollmer activity, the transition to local management of the Illinois operation was seen as a natural progression.

"The partnership is confident that this is a positive development for the Illinois office and the clients. No changes to the local staff are intended — projects will continue to be handled by current employees from the existing office," Greenbaum said.

Vollmer Associates has worked in southern Illinois for over 15 years, opening its Midway office in late 1980. It currently employs 35 in the Collinsville office and its capabilities include civil and structural engineering services.

Vollmer has completed design services for major building sites, new streets and street rehabilitation, major highways and highway bridges, utility extensions and relocations, drainage facilities and recreation facilities. The Illinois office is fully staffed with registered professionals in each discipline, computer facilities for technical computations and computer-aided drafting, and field and laboratory facilities for survey and construction testing.

Local projects include preparation of overall aesthetic guidelines for Interstate 255, along with design of the I-255/I-270 interchange and, as a design team member, preparation of plans for the new $12 million Illinois Regional Headquarters in Collinsville, the new $5 million Cahokia Mounds Visitor Center and the new $5 million Gateway Center.

The Illinois Department of Transportation recently awarded the first design section of Federal Aid Primary 412 to Vollmer Associates. FAP 412 is the extension of Interstate 255 from Interstate 270 to the Alton area.

The Vollmer design section entails $41 million in construction costs and will include two interchanges and 12 separate bridge structures. Design services consist of field survey, right-of-way documents, hydraulic studies, geometric design, aesthetic evaluation, quantity estimates and contract plans and specifications.

Technology law designed to help business

SPRINGFIELD — Gov. James R. Thompson announced Thursday that the first major component of the $30 million Technology Advancement Investment Act is now available to help qualified businesses implement new technologies to improve productivity and effectiveness.

An important component of that act is the creation of the Advanced Technology Investment Program. This program is intended to help both new and existing Illinois companies invest in new technologies by offering them loans, grants and equity investments.

Thompson said,

Steven D. McClure, acting director of the Department of Commerce and Community Affairs, which administers the Advanced Technology Investment Program, said it has four components: the Technology Investment Program, the Business Modernization Assessment Program, the Business Modernization Grant Program, the Business Modernization Retooling Loan Program and the Development Corporations Program.

Nearly 105,000 scientists and engineers contribute to (Illinois') status as a technology leader.'

Gov. James R. Thompson

The Technology Venture Investment Program provides funding for new and existing firms that need to research and develop new products, services, processes or technologies.

The Business Modernization Assessment Grant Program allows qualified firms to receive matching grants to pay a consultant to conduct a feasibility assessment or competitive analysis.

The Business Modernization Retooling Loan Program provides low-interest loans to help businesses facing competitiveness challenges retool and modernize.

The Advanced Technology Investment Program is a development corporations program. Development corporations — publicly or privately chartered development banks — that operate as lenders under state or federal guarantees are an important source of business capital for businesses whose credit requirements cannot be served well through conventional lenders.

"Illinois is recognized as a leader in many fields," Thompson said. "Our state is first in the production of pianos, televisions and radios, processing of canned and frozen food and candy manufacturing.

"We are a dominant force in the production of automobiles, construction and agricultural implements, fabricated metal parts, computers, television sets, radios and nearly 105,000 scientists and engineers contribute to our status as a technology leader."

"We need to harness this strength and encourage its growth. The Advanced Technology Investment Program will help us accomplish this goal."
